

September 2018 – An Upcycled Art Exhibition by Paul McFarland

This single-artist pop art exhibition is a delight for the senses.

An upcycled sculpture made from recycled plastic bottles

Diverse pieces ranging from recycled-material sculptures of giant insects, lion's heads, & geometric mobiles to vibrantly painted landscapes and pencil-sketch portraits brought to life weave this artist's web of creativity & imagination. On display in the Harlin Museum's Hathcock Gallery until September 15th. A MUST SEE!!!

This ant could eat us all! But fear not, he is merely for decoration. We hope.
